

Dear Sirs:

I want to register my opposition to the petition from the Consumer Bankers Association to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption upon Indiana residents.

I do not want sales calls on my telephone from anyone -- including those with whom I have a business relationship -- unless I give them explicit permission to do so. CBA's petition has no valid public interest issue and is obviously self-serving. They already have the right to contact me regarding legitimate business relating to my relationships with them. Do not give in to this blatant attempt to circumvent one of the most successful laws in Indiana's history.
